BAYERNPARTEI ARCHIVES AT THE ADVN
INVENTORY

Brief history¹

The Bavarian Party (Bayernpartei, BP) was founded on 28 October 1946 in the Gasthof Straubinger Hof in München by Ludwig Max Lallinger and Jakob Fischbacher. Together with the Christian-Social Union (Christlich-Soziale Union, CSU) it constituted the heir to the Bavarian People's Party, which was active before World War II. As the American occupying forces refused to authorise the party, it was not until 1948 that the BP was officially recognised as a national party.

The party reached its peak in the late 1940s and 1950s. This went hand-in-hand with an exponential growth in membership which rose from 15,000 to 25,000 from the end of 1948 to October 1949. At the first elections in which the BP took part, the 1948 local elections, 153 councillors were elected in the towns and 309 councillors in the provincial districts. In the same year the BP began to hold an annual local or regional party meeting, known as the Politischer Aschermittwoch. Until 1952 the Bavarian Party was the only party to organise such an event, but later on this became a tradition for all the big German parties.

In its party manifesto the BP promoted the independence of the Bavarian state within Europe. Its leaders wanted to free the region from the central power of the Bundesrepublik (Federal Republic) and strengthen the Bavarian national identity. In the founding years they called for a transition to a free economy, a strengthening and modernisation of Bavarian agriculture, the electrification of industry, train-lines and households and the development of a social security system for the working class.

The party leaders were seen as the guardians of the Bavarian identity, in which Catholicism plays an inherent role. The dominance of the party's Catholic side was noticeably reduced by opposition campaigns by the CSU. This party, the strongest competition to the BP, presented the BP as an enemy of the Catholic Church, which eventually created a non-Catholic perception. In reaction to these campaigns, the liberal fraction within the BP became more influential.

Under the leadership of Joseph Baumgartner the BP succeeded in gaining 20.9% of the votes for the German Parliament in 1949. From 1949 to 1953 it had seventeen members in the Bundestag (Federal Parliament).

In the first half of the 1950s the positive electoral trend continued and the BP became the third most important party in Bavaria, after the CSU and the Social-Democratic Party (Sozialdemokratische Partei Deutschlands, SPD). In the 1950 local elections the party won 17.9% of the thirty-nine seats in the Bavarian Landtag. From 1954-1957 the BP was represented by two ministers and two state secretaries in the Bavarian state government; party chairman Baumgartner was deputy minister-president.

The party continued to focus on regionalism. The BP accepted the German state but accentuated its federal character and strived for as great an influence as possible from Bavaria on federal politics.

After the initial success the results began to fall. The eruption of the Spielbankenaffäre in 1959 sparked a period of crisis. Two BP politicians, Baumgartner and August Geislhöring, were accused of bribery by a casino owner in exchange for obtaining a license. Although both of them were initially exonerated, they were still charged in 1959. More than ten years later, though, it seemed the affair had been set up by the head of the CSU, Friedrich Zimmerman, out of fear of the electoral threat that the CSU believed the BP posed. The ploy proved to be a success as the BP was punished electorally after the affair.

On a federal level the BP had already disappeared from parliament by 1953 and after 1969 it no longer took part in the national elections. The 1962 elections were the last elections in which the BP could send members to the Bavarian Landtag. At the time the BP formed a coalition government with the CSU. Robert Wehgartner was state secretary and elected as party chairman. This cooperation ended four years later when Wehgartner was not re-elected as party chairman and switched to the CSU.

The party membership followed a similar trend. In the beginning the party experienced rapid growth but from the late 1950s onwards there was a marked decrease in the number of members and it was not until the end of the 1970s that this trend could be reversed. In 1967 the number of members decreased spectacularly due to the founding of the Bayerische Staatspartei (BSP), followed by the separation of the Christliche Bayerische Volkspartei (CBV) in 1976.

In 1967 a group lead by Helmut Kalkbrenner and Joseph Panholzer left the BP and founded the Bayerische Staatspartei (BSP). | ADVN

In 1978 the party reached an all-time election low when it attracted just 0.4% of the votes in the regional elections. Despite the disappointing election results, the party has continued to take part in elections. Since the late 1970s there was a very gradual but steady increase in votes. At the Landtag elections of 1994 the BP achieved 1% of the votes. Thanks to this, the BP could lay claim to subsidised party financing for the first time in twenty-four years.

A number of issues appeared repeatedly in the party manifestos. The BP called for the active support of the agricultural industry, as well as small and medium-sized businesses, and wanted the civil service to get the necessary attention. Furthermore, the BP wants to protect the environment and, ideally, it would like the Christian world vision to form the basis of politics. As expected, regionalism is still an important issue. There are a number of demands which reappear frequently including the wish for a Bavarian president and a law which would outline the relationship between Bavaria and the federal republic of Germany. On top of this the BP wants to organise a referendum on Bavarian independence. The BP has a positive view towards Europe; it sees the European Union as a way to make the German state superfluous and also as a means to realise its dream of a free and independent Bavaria. The BP is member of the European Free Alliance (EFA), since the Europe it envisages for the future is, as expected, a Europe of Regions.

Archival history

In 1979 a part of the historical party archives was housed in the Bavarian Central Archives (Hauptstaatsarchiv) in Munich in exchange for a financial compensation. A second batch was moved there in the course of the 1990s. Both batches ('Bayernpartei I' and 'Bayernpartei II') were released and they include documents from the 1940s-1990s, including reports of party commissions and party meetings, letters, correspondence from the party secretary, the Landtag fraction and the chairman, as well as items from the local branches.

The Institut für Zeitgeschichte (Institute of Contemporary History) in München houses some archived material of the BP from its early period of 1945-1972. These documents contain, amongst other things, the personal archives of professor Anton Berr, member of the BP, and a copy of the personal archives of Fischbacher, earlier party leader and leader of the Kreisverband Oberbayern. Alongside these, there are also diverse documents from the party organisation: statutes, manifestos, institutional files, correspondence, financial documents and meeting reports.

On 23 November 2010 a further part of the historical party archives was transferred, this time to the ADVN (Archival, Documentation and Research Centre for Flemish Nationalism) in Antwerp. Earlier that year the BP had contacted NISE (National movements and Intermediary Structures in Europe) in the search for a solution for its remaining archives, dissatisfied as the leaders were with their earlier choice of the Bayerisches Hauptstaatsarchiv. The archives from the BP primarily consist of administrative documents such as correspondence, reports, financial accounts and electoral files from the national level as well as the local branches. Alongside these, there are also files from the chairs Max Zierl, Ewald May, Hubert Dorn and Florian Weber. The archives also contain various posters, photos and film rolls. The majority of the archives are dated from between 1970-2010 but there are also items that date back to the origins in the 1940s.

Scope and content

The archives from the Bavarian Party consist of primarily administrative documents, as mentioned previously. They portray the political activities of the BP and are important sources that chart the political development in Bavaria. The documents concerning the elections for the Bundestag, Landtag, Bezirkstag or Kreistag offer an interesting insight into the electoral history of the party.

In the General section there are files and documents concerning the statutes, manifestos, regulations, memorial celebrations and the party's website.

The section Governing bodies contains documents about the work of the party secretary and the leadership in the period 1950-2000.

The archives contain many finance related items from both the Landesverband and the Bezirks-, Kreis- and Ortsverbände (Finances section). In this section one will find mainly financial reports, journals, cashbooks, invoices and proof of expenditures from the years 1940-2000.

The extensive membership administration has been well preserved for the years 1977-2000 (Member administration section).

The most extensive section is that of the work done by the branches (Branches section) which contains interesting information for the Bezirks-, Kreis- and Ortsverbände about the general business and the elections.

In the section Publications there are documents from 1980-1990 concerning published items of the BP.

The section entitled Press and views contains, above all, press releases from the period 1950-2000.

An important section is the Elections section. In this section one can consult documents concerning the regional, national and European elections between 1940-2000.

Finally, there is the section entitled External contacts which contains the external communication from BP during the period 1980-2000.

System of arrangement

The archives were originally preserved in binders, but were reorganised and cleaned.

The majority of the titles on the binders were too brief or did not match the contents. A substantial effort was made to respect the original order where possible, based on the intentions of the archives creator.

The following sections have been created for the archives according to the ADVN model scheme for the archives of organisations:

1. General
2. Governing bodies
3. Finances
4. Member administration
5. Branches
6. Publications
7. Press and views
8. Elections
9. External contacts

The sections Finances and Branches are split into subsections: Landes-, Bezirks-, Kreis-, Ortsverband and Jungbayernbund.

Conditions governing access

The Bavarian Party archives at the ADVN are registered as BE ADVN AC884 – Bayernpartei archives and are in a good condition, so there are no specific requirements in order to consult them. However, access is limited under general ADVN regulations and thus restricted for non-published documents and files until thirty years after creation. For further information regarding access to the archives, please refer to the staff in the reading room and the reading room rules.
